

Hand-made model constructed to scale by Mr. St. J. Miller before any concrete plans were made. Note likeness to the finished building.

Finally above ground — rough floor laid by volunteers.

The ribs are in place and the first skin is being put on.

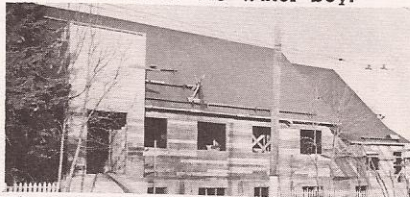

Meanwhile on the inside, things were going along quite well.

Work has begun — forms for the basement.

Two archs are up. The most difficult period past. These archs, the first of this kind used in Calgary, had been ordered and were on the way to St. Mark's, and the church had no money. But the prayers of this church family were heard. From here on it seems till the church was completed, things went on very well. Thanks to all, from the contractor to the water boy.

The roof is on and the church is really taking shape.

Boy, did that furnace make a difference. For several Sundays heat had been supplied by a flame in an oil barrel in the basement and the heat coming through holes in the floor.
